Program to consider Galena's African American Heritage

GALENA—In honor of Black History Month, historian Scott Wolfe will conduct the Galena-Jo Daviess County Historical Society's free program, "History Deferred: The African American Heritage of Galena. The program starts at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 17 at the Galena Elks Lodge, 123 N. Main St.

This discussion, the second part of the History Matters Winter Program Series, uncovers the social, religious and political involvement of Galena's black population. Through extensive research, Wolfe, a Galena Public Library historian, will highlight lives such as Richard Henry Cain, a Galena barber who later became a Reconstruction Congressman from South Carolina. Wolfe will also discuss the attitudes of the dominant white population toward the black community. The culture in Galena varied from divisive to inclusive, Wolfe said, depending on whether people were students, visitors or well-to-do residents.

In addition, Wolfe will share his own adventures, tracing the movements of Galena's African American residents in Mississippi and Tennessee. Illinois Bank & Trust is a premier sponsor of the History Matters Winter Program Series. Sponsorship for this presentation is also provided by the Grace Episcopal Church.

More to come

Coming up, the History Matters Winter Program Series continues on March 17 with "Regional Baseball History." This talk queues up the museum's special exhibit on early local baseball history, which opens to the public on March 30, just after major league baseball's opening day. The last program, "John Kinzie, The Last Silver Man" ends the History Matters Winter Program Series on April 7. Those events lead up to celebrations on U.S. Grant's Birthday Weekend, April 12 to 14.

Covered in ice

Another winter storm blanketed much of the region with a coat of ice Feb. 6-7

Above and at right, trees in Galena were coated with a thin layer of ice after another storm moved through the area last week, on Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 6-7. Mark Van Osdol photos

Carla Randecker captured this scene, as well as the bird feeder and another ice-covered grass shot, both below, in the back yard of her rural Galena home on Feb. 7. The coating of ice was beautiful as long as there was no need to be out in it. Roads, driveways and sidewalks were treacherous until the salt went to work. LETTER FROM OUR READERS

Missing the bigger picture

by Chuck Wemstrom, Mt. Carroll

Sometimes, Americans tend to look inward and miss the bigger picture. Refugees are not just Mexicans or Central Americans, indigenous people or Euro-Americans or criminals trying to enter the United States. They are human beings.

They are coming here because they are running from gangs, poverty, sexual abuse, unemployment and starvation. They want to come here for the exact same reasons our ancestors came here, for the opportunity for a better life.

We need to realize that these caravans, these refugees, are part of a world-wide phenomenon. The Syrians who are fleeing their war-torn country had originally fled from the countryside to the Syrian cities to escape a Climate Change drought. The people of Bangladesh are fleeing Climate Change-induced rising sea levels. Others crossing the Mediterranean Sea from sub-Sahara Africa are also fleeing Climate Change drought, civil wars and spreading deserts.

The worldwide reaction has been the same as the vocal minority in this country. "Keep them out." "Let them drown." "Let them die in the desert."

Germans, English, Greeks, Italians, Australians and Asian Indians are fighting to keep these refugees out of their countries. They'd rather watch them die than let them in.

The number of refugees, perhaps 70 million, is going to continue to increase because of the ongoing predatory global economy, continued civil wars, some of which the US has helped instigate, drug wars which we encourage by our purchases, and Climate Change, which we helped create.

Ironically, in coming decades, the Midwest could be inundated with US migrants, refugees from our own three coasts which will soon be plagued by rising sea levels, heat, drought, tropical storms and wildfires.

We have to face our fears and work to overcome them. Every group of immigrants has helped build a stronger economy and has helped build a more robust culture. We have to realize that our culture and our identity are always changing and growing. We don't even speak the English of our English ancestors. Every immigrant group has helped change and enrich our language, culture and even our identity.

The world is in flux. It has always been in a state of change. The stability we crave and believe existed is part of a mythical past and has always been a lie.

Many elementary school teachers play a game with their students, how many place names are Native American or French; how many foods have Spanish, French, Italian names. How many English expressions in the Harry Potter books are not part of our American vocabulary?

Let's be guided by our best humanitarian instincts and idealism. Let's help feed, clothe and educate the refugees. Instead of a wall, let's send more people to the border to process applications; the immigrant court backlog now surpasses one million cases. TRAC immigration (Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse at Syracuse University) reports that the number represents an overall growth rate of 49% since President Trump took office.

Refugees want to learn English; let's help them. Some already have skills that we need in a country desperate for workers. Let's hire them. We need all kinds of workers, including hospitality workers, healthcare workers and scientists.

Paradoxically, this is an opportunity to help fix some of the world's ills, many of which we helped create. The refugee problem is not just another problem; it's an opportunity to help heal some of the wounds we have inflicted on the world.

Where is the outrage?

by Denise Sedlak, Galena

We can all likely think of a time when someone said something that made us cringe, and we hoped against hope that we had simply misheard. This was the case for me last week when Virginia Governor Ralph Northam casually explained what occurs in a late term abortion. When asked about a Democratic delegate's proposed bill to allow abortions to be performed up to the moment of birth, Northam nonchalantly described the process with these words, "I can tell you exactly what would happen. The infant would be delivered. The infant would be kept comfortable. The infant would be resuscitated if that's what the mother and family desired, and then a discussion would ensue between the physicians and mother."

As I am writing these incredulous words I am completely outraged! How noble of those physicians to resuscitate the child, and keep it comfortable, while then deciding to possibly take its life. Have we as a society become so ideologically secularized that we have lost all respect for the most helpless and vulnerable among us?

My horror was fueled even further when I read Sunday's Tribune (Feb 3, Page 25) It was a twenty paragraph article explaining that Northam was being pressured to step down as Governor because of a recently discovered racist yearbook picture. Yes, that picture is appalling and despicable. But, is it more despicable than taking the life of a living, breathing infant? Apparently the Associated Press article appears to make that case with 19 of the 20 paragraphs explaining the evil and fallout from the racist picture, yet only one paragraph (one sentence) alluding to the late term abortion remarks.

I believe that as a people we are better than this. It is not simply a religious issue, or a women's choice issue. This is the atrocity of infanticide! As a society we need to pause and examine the very fabric of our nation's morality. Some things can simply never be justified. We are a nation conceived with the promises of liberty and justice for all. When will that protection, that liberty, and that justice which we proudly profess be equally extended to the unborn?

Merrily like Frisky

by Angelina Kim, Elizabeth

A quarter of the kitchen window facing the west is blocked with snow that came down last night. I haven't seen deer's footprints in the yard for several days. Where is Frisky now? Frisky is a little cute fawn. I'm not sure if it is a girl or a boy. I saw it for the first time in June last year. Frisky was running with fun around the buckwheat patch in the backyard one early morning. I named it Frisky because of its light and merry movement at the time. It was like a tiny horse with white spots. I believe it has become a teenager. If it is a boy it might have small horns. The deer may be looking for food in this cold. Or, it may be waiting for this tough time to pass quickly in a secret serene valley.

I fed the fireplace enough wood hearing the fierce wind outside the window. I turned up one of my favorite songs, Chyi Yu's Donde voy and boiled water for a cup of tea. This winter isolates people but gives them hope as well. Some of them dream of warm spring with beautiful flowers and some may dream of a change in life. I hope their dreams come true on a sunny spring day after this brutal season. It may sound a little bit funny. My current dream is walking on the street in a cute chiffon dress that is waving lightly in a sweet spring breeze.

I've realized that I still have too many belongings while looking for a crochet hook. Although I'm always careful not to increase my possessions, they are getting bigger and bigger as time goes by. I believe possessions can limit freedom in some ways. It could make us hesitate when we leave for another world. And when we want to fly like a little bird, belongings are just a shackle.

I've just got used to writing the number of 2019 after a month has passed. But I need to add one more new year's resolution at this late time. That is to decrease my belongings so that I could run light and merrily like Frisky.

'I know the rest'

by Bob and Judith Wehrle, Galena

John Bernardi's quote of Mark Twain in his letter to editor last week reminded me and Judith of another Mark Twain quote, this one about Rudyard Kipling. The Twain quote could probably also be attributed to John Bernardi. "He is a stranger to me, but he is a most remarkable man—and I am the other one. Between us, we cover all knowledge; he knows all that can be known, and I know the rest."

With every manner of real or imagined expertise available at our fingertips, why are the current Galena lectures so well-attended, often to standing room only? Even on snowy days, our venues are packed for live play readings, poetry, public talks on civic issues, musical events or art openings.

In addition to being drawn to the expertise of our local talent, I suspect we are also eager to flee our technological world and sit in a room with other living, breathing humans for a shared experience. This coming Sunday, for example, it would take five inches of snow and frozen roads for me to think of missing Scott Wolfe's talk, "History Deferred: The African American Heritage of Galena." Wolfe is one of our fine local historians; the subject interests me; I might be able to ask a question, should I have one.

Wolfe's talk will be held at the Elks Lodge on Main Street. I was curious if the Elks Lodge had been one of the 19th-century halls which brought in public speakers at some time in its past. Instead, I discovered that the Gibson building, where the Elks Club is located, collapsed in 1955. It had never been a speaking venue.

The Galena Gazette of Feb. 22, 1955, reported, "Old-timers about Galena remember that the building was used by three generations of Gibsons—first as a harness shop, later as a hardware store."

Visiting 19th and early 20th century orators spoke at venues such as Davis Hall on Main Street, Turner Hall, tents, platforms, and churches.

The Lyceum movement which started in Millbury, Massachusetts in 1826 was a form of adult education which eventually provided famous lecturers who were paid for their presentations. The Lyceum movement thrived through the Civil War but then gradually morphed into the Chautauqua movement which started in the 1870s.

Though I discovered a long list of notables who spoke in 19th century and early 20th century Galena, after seeing the Congresswomen in white at the recent State of the Union address, my attention focused on one speaker, Anna Dickinson.

Born into poverty, Dickinson grew in stature as strongly outspoken orator whose fiery manner was impassioned and, for some, highly controversial. A staunch abolitionist in her early addresses, following the Civil War in her oratory "Reconstruction" she unhesitatingly declared that the South needed to be dealt with harshly.

On Jan. 23, 1868, Anna Dickinson spoke in Galena's Davis Hall on the subject "Idiots and Women." The Galena Daily Gazette made it clear that "she has nothing to say directly upon the subject of that unfortunate class of beings called Idiots, but that the title is a sort of foil; the idea suggested being that woman bears to society, so far as rights and privileges are concerned, somewhat the same relations as do Idiots."

The Galena Daily Gazette reviewed her presentation the next day calling the talk "large and intelligent. . . She held the full attention of the audience, who were evidently in a mood to do her and her subject impartial justice."

Her lectures included "Woman's Work and Wages; Between Us Be Truth," which was on the "social evil" of venereal disease, and "What Answer," which was also the title of a novel she wrote about the marriage of an interracial couple, radical material in 1868. Eventually, Dickinson was placed in a "mental institution" for her "instability."

Her story, her fame and then her disappearance trouble me.

What started out as a simple curiosity regarding speakers in Galena brought me surprisingly full circle back to Scott Wolfe's presentation on Galena's African American Heritage. He was the one, in fact, who introduced me to Dickinson as one of many orators brought to Galena in the 19th century.

Why do people flock to hear our speakers, artists, poets in person in this digital age of information? I guess it is, in part, because there is an energy which can only be communicated in live presentations. What exactly does Wolfe mean when he speaks of history which has been deferred?

I suspect I will find out when I go to his presentation this Sunday, Feb. 17, 3-4 p.m., at the Galena Elks Lodge, 123 North Main St.

And then, because he is live, I can always ask him a question.

Republicans looking to recharge

State party leaders and local reps talk election losses, pensions and property taxes

by Dan Burke
dburke@galgazette.com

Winning back voters was a focus of discussion at the Jo Daviess County Republicans annual Lincoln Day Dinner at Eagle Ridge Spa & Resort, on Saturday, Feb. 2.

Democrats won all state-level elected offices and took control of both the state house and senate. Pat Brady, WGN political commentator, asked, "What the hell happened?"

"We lost," answered Jim Durkin, state house Republican leader.

Durkin was joined by state senate Republican leader Bill Brady for a question and answer session, and the two were the keynote speakers of the evening.

Former state senator Tim Bivins was recognized for his political service and state representatives Tony McCombie (71st District), Andrew Chesney (89th District) and state senator Brian Stewart (45th District) also spoke.

What did happen?

Commenting on the governor's race, Durkin said Republican incumbent Bruce Rauner lost the race more than Democrat J.B. Pritzker won.

"J.B. Pritzker didn't win," said Durkin. "Bruce Rauner lost it."

While Rauner won a majority of rural counties, Durkin said it was Cook County and the surrounding suburbs that hurt Republicans, and added that Republican President Donald Trump helped push suburban voters to Pritzker.

"The president lost favorability in the suburbs," said Durkin.

Durkin said the state's lengthy budget impasse and Rauner signing House Bill 40 sealed defeat for the GOP. HB40 allows state health insurance and Medicaid to be used for abortions.

Brady said new messaging is needed to appeal to voters.

"It's a challenge in the suburbs," said Brady. "We have to come up with a message that's independent of the president if we are to regain ground."

Blame wasn't limited to the president. Durkin said the party as a whole wasn't putting the "right people in the right districts," and Brady said stronger grass roots efforts were needed to counter Pritzker's spending.

Pritzker and Rauner set records for campaign spending, raising a combined $255 million. Pritzker spent more than $160 million of his own money, while Rauner spent $58 million out-of-pocket.

An audience member asked why the party has to move away from Trump's policies to win elections in Illinois. Durkin said he wasn't sure if it was Trump's policies or his rhetoric that contributed to the party's numerous defeats, but the final result was "we lost."

Brady said the party wasn't moving away from Trump's policies, but his "messaging."

Pensions and property taxes

The Republican leaders addressed two hot-button issues for the state in recent years, pensions and property taxes. One of Rauner's platforms in his 2016 campaign was pension reform to reduce the state's debt, and it has long been reported that Illinois has some of the highest property taxes in the nation.

Brady said pension reform without creating jobs is a losing proposition.

"Frankly, we're not going to solve pension (reform) and cut spending enough to turn this thing around," said Brady. "We need to create more jobs."

Illinois lacks the long-term stability businesses are looking for, said Brady, and the solution is creating business-friendly policies.

"There's no positive ending for the state of Illinois without job creation," said Brady.

Durkin said the party has ignored pension reform for too long and he would like to find ways to negotiate pensions.

"We've put our head in the sand," said Durkin. "This can't be a state where pensions crowd out other needs."

Durkin said Illinois spends $9.5 billion on pensions out of its $36 billion general fund, with a total state budget of $60 billion.

School districts present the "biggest challenge" to property tax relief, said Brady, and contributing to the problem is the loss of home value.

"People's homes are losing value because property taxes are taking away people's ability to pay for their homes," said Brady.

In another economic topic, Durkin said he is concerned about a push to increase the state's minimum wage to $15 per hour. Durkin said it will be hard to vote against a wage increase, but "it is something we have to do" because it will have "the opposite effect." Durkin said raising the minimum wage will reduce jobs and hurt businesses.

District maps and gerrymandering

Durkin said gerrymandering of districts is a problem in the state.

"I understand how Chicago politics work," said Durkin, "and it no longer works. Gerrymandering is for keeping power. To the victor go the spoils."

Brady said there will be a chance to redistrict in 2020 and he is looking for bipartisan support to approve constitutional amendments to reform the process.

Bivins honored

Former state senator Tim Bivins was recognized for his 10 years of service representing the 45th District. Bivins did not seek reelection in 2018 and was succeeded by Stewart.

County board member and former sheriff Steve Allendorf introduced Bivins. Allendorf said he and Bivins have been friends since meeting at a sheriff's conference more than three decades ago. Allendorf praised Bivins' honesty and commitment to fighting for his constituents.

"I'm so proud of my friend," said Allendorf. "It's been an honor to serve," said Bivins. "I knew my life had to be one of service."

Local reps speak

Due to time constraints, the other speakers gave brief statements. Chesney warned that the "ideology that used to stay in Chicago" is spreading beyond the city limits and collar counties. Chesney encouraged everyone to become involved in local politics to help the party "win some elections."

McCombie said the party needs to lead with policies and kindness, and Stewart, who was left the least amount of time as the final speaker, simply encouraged everyone to open their wallets for the sweets auction.

Shelby Miller settles into her new role with the Galena-Jo Daviess County Historical Society

by Hillary Dickerson

GALENA—Since September, when Shelby Miller assumed her new role as curator and director of education and outreach for the Galena-Jo Daviess County Historical Society, she's been busy.

Almost immediately, she jumped into helping with the annual Fall Tour of Historic Homes, one of the museum's main events. That was followed by presentations to fifth through eighth grade students throughout northwest Illinois about the Driftless region and then planning for the society's annual winter program series. Her attention has now turned to April, when she'll be busy with Grant's birthday and Boy Scout weekends. And on top of that, she's preparing for an extensive inventory of the museum's collection in preparation for the move to the new museum which is planned for the Stillman Mansion property on Bouthillier Street.

All of these experiences, all of the work, has served to reassure Miller that she's in the right place and doing the work she was meant to do.

Background

Miller credits her grandmother with instilling a great appreciation for cultural events and activities.

Growing up in northern Indiana, Miller has wonderful memories of her grandmother, a teacher, loading up the grandchildren and taking them to various performances, museums and events. Miller is pretty sure she was the only one of the grandchildren to truly appreciate those experiences.

"I'm basically my grandmother," said Miller.

As a senior in high school, Miller was considering becoming a high school history teacher, but when her grandmother suggested museum studies, Miller was intrigued. She researched the profession and found a college that offered the program.

Miller graduated in May 2018 from Lynchburg College in Lynchburg, Va., where she double majored in history and capturing culture. She had great on-campus experiences as she worked for two years in an art gallery. Miller also worked in three different libraries, focusing specifically on curriculum and children's programs.

Just a couple months later, Miller was on her way to Galena, a community she's grown to love for its rich history and variety. She's already joined the Friends of the Library and the League of Women Voters, and is participating in the Jo Daviess County Leadership Forum.

"I've called it my dream job from the get-go," said Miller.

Caring for the collection

Miller loves all the different aspects of her job from working with and managing the collection to doing outreach and educational programs. Her days are a mix of event planning, exhibit development and design and preparing to do an inventory of the with committees, interns and volunteers to move the process forward. With her museum studies background, we are pleased to have Shelby leading our curatorial program."

Miller and others will start in the upstairs storage rooms at the museum and look at every object. They'll check the condition and fill out a sheet of paper for everything in the 10,000-plus-item collection.

According to state law, when museum items are moved from one location to another, donors must be contacted. Miller is in the process of making those contacts to explain what will happen and why.

"It's a big job," she said, undaunted and grateful for the assistance of faithful volunteer Kris Chapman who has been working with the collection for years and knows it well. "We need to know what we have and where it is."

In anticipation of the eventual move, an updated collections policy is in place, Miller said. The policy outlines how the collection is cared for, why items are collected and what types of items should be included.

"Any items which are duplicates, deteriorated, or not contributing to the history of this area will be considered for deaccessioning," said Breed. "Preservation of objects comes with a financial commitment to care for them in perpetuity. Under Shelby's guidance, only museum-quality items will make the move across the river."

Miller is also excited about the new Guardians of History group that is forming. The volunteers will be key in assisting with the storage, organization and documentation of the museum's collection.

Preparing the Peace in Union painting, the focal point of the second floor exhibit hall, for a journey across town is not a simple undertaking, but Miller thinks the details are worked out.

The society has a formal agreement in place with the city to move the massive 1895 Thomas Nast painting, given to the city by Herman Kohlsaat.

When the Bench Street museum opened in 1938, the painting was removed from its frame and the canvas rolled to fit through a back window.

This time around, the painting will remain in the frame. Instead, bricks will be removed from below a second floor window to create a large enough opening for the painting to fit through. Once the painting is safely out, the bricks will be reinstalled by a mason.

In addition to the items already in the collection, Miller said, she also works with the items being donated and decides if they fit with the stories being told. There is, after all, only so much storage space so it is important that the items fit. Miller goes through a process to determine whether or not the items should go into the educational collection or the permanent collection.

Miller is also busy gathering items—photographs and other memorabilia—for the two new exhibits coming this spring, "Play Ball! Our Regional Story" will open with opening day, March 28, and "The Fight for Suffrage" will open in May.

Education and outreach

Aside from her curatorial duties, Miller embraces the education and outreach aspect as well.

Jumping right in to the mix with the home tour was a great way, Miller said, to make connections in the community and learn. She finalized details with homeowners, organized volunteers and tied up the loose ends.

"That was a lot of fun," she said.

In the months since September, Miller has continued to build upon those early connections in the community. She's had lots of other opportunities with the currently-underway winter program series and the forthcoming April events and the June Cemetery Walk.

In the fall, thanks to a grant from the Illinois Humanities Council, Miller traveled with volunteers to do the "Mysteries of the Driftless" film presentation to approximately 1,300 students in fifth through eighth grades in three counties in northwest Illinois. It was an excellent opportunity, she said, to share with the students how unique this area is and how important it is to share the details of what makes it so. Miller is looking forward to hosting school groups that come to visit the museum.

'Making cancer patients better'

Dr. Keith Thraen-Borowski's clinical trial at Loras College hopes to improve cancer survivorship

by Hillary Dickerson
hdickerson@galgazette.com
DUBUQUE, Iowa—Dr. Keith Thraen-Borowski, an assistant professor of kinesiology and biology at Loras College, is well aware that everything that's known about the correlation between cancer and physical activity has come from major research institutions or cancer centers. He wants to change that.

fyi
For more information on Dr. Keith Thraen-Borowski's research and the ongoing clinical trial on the role of physical activity in the health and quality of life of cancer survivors, visit careslab.org.

When Thraen-Borowski, a Galena resident, started at Loras in 2016, he knew cancer survivors from the tri-state area were traveling to either Madison, Wis., or Iowa City, Iowa, to participate in exercise and cancer research. While he was a doctorate student at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Thraen-Borowski had done that one-and-a-half-hour drive from his home in Galena many times. He knows it can wear on a person.

Thraen-Borowski's vision was to make such studies available closer to home, preferably right on the Loras Campus.

He knew there would be benefits for the patients and for undergraduate students who would basically be doing master's level research work, and that oncologists would appreciate having a cancer survivorship program to offer their patients.

All of the pieces started coming together. The Loras administration supported Thraen-Borowski's vision and have gone above and beyond to help make it reality, he said. Thraen-Borowski, who'd gotten into cancer research with exercise during his doctoral program as a fluke and opted to focus on it because it gave him "the ability to change the scope of cancer care," was immediately impressed by the sense of community at Loras.

From 2016-2018, Thraen-Borowski worked in his lab and did other studies. Then, this past May, the first clinical trial launched in the Cancer Research in Exercise Science (CARES) Lab. He'd been working on the launch from day one, and it all came together two years earlier than he'd anticipated.

The goal is to take between 70 and 80 cancer survivors—anyone diagnosed with cancer and still alive—through the trial in two years, Thraen-Borowski explained. The trial is for all ages of survivors, those currently undergoing treatment, no longer in treatment, newly diagnosed, long-term survivors and with cancer at any stage.

"I'm thrilled with the interest," he said of the people who have opted to be part of the trial up to this point.

Thraen-Borowski said there is a great deal of focus in the U.S. on improving the quantity of life, but there is a lot of work suggesting exercise and physical activity improve the physical, mental and social health of cancer survivors, resulting in a positive impact on the quality of life. So far in the trial, Thraen-Borowski said, the research has found physical activity results in better function and more energy in cancer survivors. Quality of life outcomes are the main focus of the study.

Working with Mercy Hospital and Medical Associates oncologists to get the trial off the ground, Thraen-Borowski said patients accepted into the study go through assessments—including a two-hour baseline visit—and then spend eight weeks in the fitness center, working with CARES Lab students three days each week and on their own another two on individualized exercise programs, from walking on the track to resistance training and work on ellipticals, bikes and tread mills.

Since every survivor is different, the instruction and activity program is tailored for each individual, ensuring a safe and encouraging environment, he said. Survivors—up to this point those with breast, lung, fallopian tube, colon and rectal cancers, stages one through four—are referred by their doctor or can self-refer.

The trial is open to as many survivors as there is space and student availability. There is no cost to those accepted to participate.

Once the eight weeks are up, another series of assessments are completed to see what the exercise regime has done. Trial participants then receive a one-year free membership to the Loras fitness cen-

He holds a Ph.D. in Kinesiology with a specialization in Physical Activity Epidemiology from UW-Madison and has completed fellowships in Cancer Epidemiology (UW-Madison) & Supportive Oncology (MDA/Harvard Medical School). Dr. Thraen-Borowski has won the ACSM's Cancer Interest Group Research Award twice and his work has been featured on CBS' Sunday Morning, Good Morning America, CNN, and in USA Today, the LA Times, and Reuters Health.

Thraen-Borowski honored by ISU

GALENA—Dr. Keith Thraen-Borowski, a 2000 graduate of Illinois State University (ISU), will be inducted in April into the College of Applied Science & Technology Academy of Achievement.

Thraen-Borowski, who went on to earn his doctorate in kinesiology with a specialization in physical activity epidemiology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, is one of seven selected from over 47,000 names. He completed fellowships in cancer epidemiology at UW-Madison and supportive oncology at Massachusetts General Hospital/Harvard Medical School.

Those selected are considered to be "leaders in their fields & who, through their work, serve as an inspiration to others to pursue similar career paths."

Thraen-Borowski was nominated for the honor by faculty in the kinesiology department at ISU.

"I am incredibly thankful, not only to receive this honor, but to have been nominated by, and receive it from, those who have helped me get to where I am now," said Thraen-Borowski.

ter so they're able to continue the exercise program.

"This is what I love to do. . .making cancer patients better," said Thraen-Borowski.

Thraen-Borowski said that the Loras research will show whether or not such trials and programming can be done anywhere other than a major research center or university.

So many cancer survivors live far from those places, so if his study indicates those places were preferable, then attention needs to turn to how to get people to those facilities. And if it's possible and effective at places such as Loras, he said, then why are public health dollars going only to major universities and hospitals?

After all, Thraen-Borowski is committed to changing the scope of cancer care.

Obituaries

Thomas Joseph Frey

GALENA—Thomas Joseph Frey, Galena, formerly of Batavia, was looking forward to pitchers and catchers reporting on his birthday, Feb. 12, and perhaps even his beloved White Sox beginning play on the earliest opening day, ever, March 28, when he got called up to the only Big League that really matters, while at home, on Jan. 26, 2019.

Tom was born to Arthur Louis and Marguerite Mary (McInerny) Frey on Feb. 12, 1933, in Chicago.

Thomas Frey

He graduated from Mount Carmel High School in 1951.

Tom enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve, and was honorably discharged as a Personnelman Third Class (PN3), June of 1953, as the Korean War wound down.

Tom attended the Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University, Washington D.C., using the benefits provided by the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (the G.I. Bill) and working nights for Eastern Air Lines at Washington National Airport, Washington D.C., where he met Velma, who became the great love of his life.

Tom and Velma were married on Nov. 24, 1954, at St. Mary Catholic Church, Alexandria, Va.

The entire family had the bittersweet joy and privilege of watching a real-life version of Nicholas Sparks' 1996 novel, "The Notebook," as Tom took care of Velma for over seven years as she suffered with Alzheimer's disease.

After graduating from Georgetown University, Tom worked his way up through a variety of positions in distribution and transportation management, achieving his goal of becoming a vice president of a Fortune 500 company within 20 years of his graduation.

Along the way he received his MBA in finance from the Kellogg School of Management, Northwestern University, Evanston.

One of his proudest accomplishments was opening one of the first manufacturing facilities in Mississippi with an integrated workforce in 1962.

Throughout his career he made continuous innovations in transportation deregulation, multi-modal freight, and just-in-time delivery that contributed to the overnight delivery that we enjoy today.

Tom and Velma, who were lifetime members of the Abbott Marmion Society, retired to the Galena Territory in 1993, to golf and enjoy the regular visits of their children and grandchildren.

He is survived by his sons: Thomas Joseph Frey, Jr., CAPT USN Ret., (Holly) and David Arthur Frey, CDR USNR Ret., (Meg); four grandchildren: Thomas Joseph Frey, III, LCDR USN, Elizabeth Ann Frey, LT USN, Kristen Noelle Frey, and Julia Marie Frey; one brother-in-law, Arden Cogar; and many nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his cherished wife of 63 years, Velma Cogar Frey; his brother, Arthur (Catherine) Frey; and his sister, Mary Therese (Jack) Hepp.

A funeral mass will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 16, at St. Mary Catholic Church, Galena, where friends may gather after 10 a.m. until time of mass.

Military honors will be accorded at the church by VFW Post 2665 and American Legion Post 193, Galena, following the mass.

Burial will be at a later date. Cremation rites have been accorded.

The Furlong Funeral Chapel, Galena, is assisting the family.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to the Alzheimer's Association.

The family wishes to extend a special thank you to FHN Hospice of Freeport, Dr. Greg Vandigo and Ms. Jennifer Del Prete for their superb care of Tom and Velma.

Arts & Life

Galena resident Paul Pendola, at left at the U.S. Grant State Historic Site, started carving spoons in 2014. It was a hobby he knew would require little space and only a few tools. Since then, his hobby has taken off. After moving to Galena in the summer of 2017, Pendola got involved with All River Road Talent (ARRT) and the artist community at the Galena Center for the arts. Now that he's gained approval from the city, his Spoon Carver's Cottage on South Prospect Street is an official artisan studio, which will be on the ARRT tour the first weekend of every month and will serve as a pop-up shop between six and 10 weekends each year. Contributed photos

Sharing his carving skills

Galena's Paul Pendola, a self-taught spoon carver, creates beautiful pieces of art

GALENA—When Paul Pendola decided it was time for a hobby, he wanted something that didn't require a lot of space or tools and something with which he'd quickly see results.

fyi

and then utilizes pieces that neighbors leave sitting on his porch, as well as other lucky finds.

He's completely self-taught in the art of carving and even had a box of mistakes, he laughed, "proof that spoon carvers are made, not born."

Starting out

"It's not a big surprise that my hobby would also be in food service," said Pendola, who's been carving since 2014.

A culinary school graduate, this is Pendola's 40th year working in various capacities in the food service industry for a number of companies. Pendola's current job allows him to work from home, making it possible for him to relocate from the Chicago area to Galena in July 2017. Galena has always been a special get-away spot for Pendola, who grew up in the Chicago suburbs and has lived around the world.

The spoons Pendola creates under the name Fox River Spoon Company are all meant to be used, he explained, and when he made pieces for friends in the food service industry, they encouraged him to sell his wares. He also makes a special wood balm to ensure the spoons remain in top condition.

It was during a farmer's market in East Dundee in the fall of 2015 that Pendola saw potential. He sold out and then took a call for a custom order. A Spoon carving turned out to be the perfect fit.

After using an ax to cut the initial piece of wood, Pendola is able to carve out a simple cooking spoon in an hour's time. He can don a backpack with his tools, go for a hike and return with a piece of usable art. His spoons are all made from found wood. He searches out trees—oak, black walnut, cherry, any hard wood basically—that come down in storms, family was cutting down an oak tree and asked if Pendola could carve some spoons from the wood. He ended up making several.

"The response was overwhelming," he said, noting that it's unusual to see someone carving and it captures attention.

Spoons, too, are special pieces. He's had people share stories about their childhoods, remembering their grandmother's spoon and special memories from the kitchen.

"It's a very personal kitchen item," said Pendola.

An artist community

Since relocating to Galena in an attempt to downsize and simplify, Pendola has been overwhelmed by the warm welcome of the artist community. From the All River Road Talent (ARRT) group to the Galena Center for the Arts, Pendola has found support and encouragement among like-minded individuals.

"Galena was open arms," he said. "They really welcomed me with open arms."

Pendola said he wasn't comfortable, and still struggles with, calling himself an artist. The ARRT group and Galena Center for the Arts community gave him the confidence to do more.

Deb Bertucci of the DeSoto House Hotel invited Pendola to carve in the hotel lobby, and then asked him to make cutting and serving boards—yet another hobby—for the restaurants.

Later, when he'd sit outside his South Prospect Street cottage—overlooking the downtown between the Green Street steps and Galena Green condominiums—and carve, visitors would stop by to see what he was doing. They'd climb to the top of the steps, look right, look left and see the cottage. Others discover the cottage on trolley tours that pass by.

"This is not so much a destination as a discovery," he said.

Many of those who discovered Pendola's art wanted to purchase a piece of their own, but because of zoning restrictions Pendola was unable to sell. That led Pendola to pursue and recently gain approval for a text amendment to allow an artisan studio.

The Spoon Carver's Cottage, as the sign outside 306 S. Prospect reads, is tiny and welcoming. Pendola sees it as the perfect location for himself and other artists to thrive. The cottage, he said, will transform into a shop and gallery, a place to showcase and cultivate art. Instead of only Pendola's work, he's able to include other artists and show off their work as well. The patio will be open, weather permitting, to enjoy non-alcoholic beverages that will be offered for sale. The cottage will be open on several special occasions and is currently part of the ARRT Monthly Art Drive the first weekend of each month. When his hours expand in the spring, he'll move to the ARRT Scenic Art Loop.

Pendola is currently renovating another home in Galena and once that is finished, other artists will be able to utilize the cottage for their own events and even visiting artists might wish to stay for extended periods, perhaps to work on photography, write a book, quilt or embroider.

In the past Pendola has set up shop at Galena Country Fair and the NW IL Art Fest in Stockton. He also showed and demonstrated at the Waterford Fair in Virginia.

His cutting boards are available for sale at Galena River Wine & Cheese on Main Street in Galena. And for those who would like to learn from him, Pendola will teach a class on carving this summer—on Aug. 17—at Shake Rag Alley in Mineral Point, Wis.

With the success of his spoons, Pendola has recently branched out in two more businesses: Block & Board Co., for the cutting and serving boards, and the 1850 Cottage, named after his home on South High Street, which features products he's created from salvaged wood—votive holders, clipboards, succulent boxes and more.

A little Valentine's Day indulgence

Chocolate. It can stand all by itself—rich, delicious and enticing. Chocolate. It's a sexy, romantic morsel or a child's treat. Everyone loves chocolate.

Breakfast Diva
Susan Steffan

Originally served as an unsweetened, bitter beverage, chocolate was believed by the ancient Aztecs to be a gift from the god of wisdom and the seeds were used as currency. Chocolate was considered an aphrodisiac and to endow strength on those who drank it. In the 16th century, chocolate arrived in Europe and sugar was added. It's popularity became worldwide. (Thank you, Wikipedia.)

With Valentine's Day this weekend, an easy yet decadent chocolate dessert seems to be in order. This dessert begins as a humble brownie and is transformed into a stunning finish to the most romantic dinner.

By baking the brownie batter in a sheet pan, (that's a metal baking pan with 1 inch sides, sometimes referred to as a jelly roll pan or cookie sheet) the brownies are thinner and can be layered to accommodate a filling.

By cutting the brownies in circles they not only become a fancy torte but this also leaves behind scraps to enjoy while you bake—a tasty treat for your efforts.

But this is far from difficult and can even be done with help of the children in the family. Yes, you can use brownie mix, but home-made brownies just can't be beat. Here is my favorite brownie recipe with a few twists to make this Valentine Brownie Torte.

5 eggs
1 1/2 c all-purpose flour
1 c unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp baking soda
1 c mini chocolate chips
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease a half sheet pan or jelly roll pan with pan spray or additional butter. Whisk flour and cocoa together with soda and salt. Melt butter and combine with sugar and vanilla in a large bowl and mix with an electric mixer or whisk. Beat in eggs one at a time, mixing well.
Gradually stir in flour and cocoa mixture on low speed until no streaks of flour remain. Fold chips into batter. Spread in pan. Bake 20-25 minutes. Cool on a wire rack in pan.

Strawberry sauce
2 c fresh or frozen strawberries, sliced
1 c orange juice
1 T orange zest, optional
1/3 c sugar
2 T cornstarch
Place first four ingredients in a saucepan and bring to a boil. Simmer until strawberries are just soft but not mushy. In a measuring cup, add cornstarch to 1/4 c water and mix well. Add cornstarch mixture to simmering sauce to thicken, stirring continuously for 1 minute. You may not need all the cornstarch. Cool.

Crème Filling
2 T sugar
1 T vanilla instant pudding
1 c heavy whipping cream
Mix in a stand mixer with whisk attachment until peaks form. Then divide the crème into two bowls and fold in by hand 1/2 c cooled strawberry sauce to one bowl. (This is a great whipped cream recipe—the pudding keeps it stable and gives it flavor)
To assemble the torte: Cut out brownies with a 4 inch round cutter, two for each torte. (If you don't have a large round cutter, use a soup bowl inverted on the brownies as a guide and cut them with a knife.)
Place a large dollop of the filling between each. Plate on a smear of the sauce and top with crème, sauce and mint leaves. Serve.

Fun this summer: 4-H Camp set June 10-14

ELIZABETH—Registration for 4-H Camp 2019 is open. 4-H Camp is set for June 10-14 at Rock River Christian Camp (RRCC), Polo.
4-H Camp is a five-day, four-night residential camping experience that is conducted cooperatively by University of Illinois Extension staff in Boone, Carroll, DeKalb, Jo Daviess, Lee, Ogle, Stephenson, Whiteside and Winnebago counties and the professional staff at RRCC.
Historically, parents have sent their children to 4-H Camp for a variety of reasons: to have fun, to make new friends, to develop new skills, to be physically active and to appreciate nature. 4-H Camp is about more than one week of fun. Sending your child to 4-H Camp allows them to create memories they will carry with them through adulthood.

4-H camp teaches youth to make good decisions, build their self-confidence, become independent and gain the ability to work well with others.
These skills will help youth develop into strong adult leaders. In addition, 4-H camp counselors devote much of their personal time to ensure today's campers have the same great experience they did as children.
Campers at 4-H Camp will check-in from 6-6:30 p.m. on Monday, June 10, and checkout from 6-6:30 p.m. on Friday, June 14. During camp week, youth will engage in a variety of activities designed to challenge, educate and entertain. Two or three free-choice periods will be offered daily and will include options such as hiking, shooting sports, arts and crafts, crate stacking, team building challenges, zip-lining, swimming, and more. Evening activities will be provided by the 4-H camp counselors and include campfires, a games night and a dance. It is guaranteed to be a blast!

4-H Camp is open to all boys and girls, ages 8-14 by June 10. 4-H membership is not required; however, all participants will be expected to comply with the same high behavior standards expected of 4-Hers. Youth need to be interested and excited to have a week of outdoor fun, away from television and technology.
Cost is $250 for 4-H members and $270 for non-4-H members until March 1. After that date, the price goes up $50. All camp fees must be paid in full by May 20.
Download a camper application online at web.extension.illinois.edu/bdo or register online at go.illinois.edu/4HSummerCamp. You may also call the Extension office in Jo Daviess County at 815-858-2273.
Slots will be filled on a first come, first serve basis.

Scho-bowl team captures 4th at Winnebago tourney

GALENA—The Galena High School (GHS) scholastic bowl team continued its winning ways, taking 4th place in a field of 16 at the Winnebago Invitational Tournament on Saturday, Feb. 9.

In pool play, the Pirates went 6 and 1, taking down Rockford Guilford, Indian Creek, Byron, Stillman Valley, Buffalo Grove B, and Morrison in order before falling to a tough team from Elgin Academy. In the afternoon playoff bracket, the Pirates lost to a strong Winnebago team and then, in the final match, lost a fairly close one to Maine East.

Team captain Evelyn Larson led the scoring for the Pirates with 46 correctly answered tossups of 180 heard. Larson surpassed the GHS record for all-time tossups correctly answered, bringing her total to 514. She passed Luc Pham, who is at 485. Larson also placed third on the Winnebago All-Tournament Team with 57.14 points per game.

Henry Anderson chipped in another nine tossups for GHS, while Jessica Baltierra and Daniel Heid each answered eight. Roni Skinner and Eric Hernandez had two apiece, and Zack Ehrler had one more.

The Pirates currently have a record of 30 wins and five losses, before they head into the playoff season. Their next home meet will be on Thursday, Feb. 14 at 4 p.m. in the high school library versus Stockton; the JVs will play in room 102. Senior night festivities begin at 3:45. Admission is free.

The team will also compete in the Illinois Masonic Academic Bowl sectional at East Dubuque High School on Saturday, Feb. 16.

Willderman to perform at February Songwriters Showcase

GALENA—Songwriters Showcase on Thursday, Feb. 21 will feature musician Frankie Joe Willderman at the Galena Center for the Arts at 7 p.m.

Willderman is a well-known singer, songwriter and storyteller and Rock Island native. He boasts of roots and family up and down the Mississippi River valley. His song-writing style combines country blues and ragtime swings, often with an undercurrent of Bluegrass.

“These songs are life stories, bits and pieces taken from many colorful characters and happenings through the years. Each one is a little journey into another place and time,” he says.

Willderman is a member of the band Kinfolk, who play a full calendar of live shows throughout the year.

For more information, visit GalenaCenterForTheArts.com. or call 779-214-0261. There is no charge to attend, but donations are welcome.

Scales Mound FFA plans its February auction

SCALES MOUND—Scales Mound FFA will be hosting its labor and product auction, Saturday, Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. The auction will be held in the old gym and a complimentary meal will be served from 4:30-5:45 p.m., in the cafeteria before the auction.

Mound Bucks will be drawn randomly throughout the auction with a grand prize drawing at the end. One must be present to win the Mound Bucks.

The ag students have started asking for auction donations and have a significant list of commitments that can be viewed at tinyurl.com/ffauction19. Students will also be put on the auction block making their labor available for purchase.

The chapter uses the auction proceeds in these ways: 19 students received registration supplement for the national convention; two delegates, one talent show participant, six state degree winners and three members utilized $2,500 in registration and overnight fees to attend the state convention; eleven students received a $150 registration supplement for the upcoming 212 Conference; 50 students had the registration fee paid to attend a local leadership event and hotel fees were paid for student trips to events in central Illinois; and funds were also used for the activity costs of the annual officer retreat to plan the upcoming year as a team.

Also, lab materials with costs nearing $500 were purchased to enhance hands-on activities. Again this year, the chapter and FFA Alumni did not ask local businesses for donations to the Illinois FFA Foundation, but rather, sent $1,500 from the auction proceeds to give students the opportunity to participate in state events.

And, the Scales Mound chapter hosted an open house for all ag parents, a volleyball night for the section, hosted the job interview contest and provided a meal for all attendees for these events. Additionally, meals are provided for students competing at events and activities held in Scales Mound.

Proceeds will also be used this year to expand the vegetable food plot inside the new 26x48 hoop building and continue upgrades to the fertilizer system in the greenhouse for improved plant production.

Long-range plans still include the desire for an animal science lab or farm area where students can do more hands-on work for the animal science and veterinary technology classes and remaining funds from each year are earmarked for that project. A new interest is a need for a food lab and the equipment that would go in that.

“We are very thankful to have funds available to participate in activities and events, as well as acquire the tools needed for the classroom. The auction has been a major blessing to eliminate multiple fundraisers and to enable every student to participate in events regardless of cost,” Lisa Oellerich, FFA advisor noted.

Auction admission tickets are $15 and available from any FFA member or Oellerich. Included in the admission price is the complimentary dinner prepared by the FFA Alumni. Ticket proceeds are only used toward senior scholarships.

For questions, to purchase tickets or make a donation, call Oellerich at 815-238-6027.

Pirate Competitor of the Week

Junior scholastic bowl player Sophia Getz is this week's Pirate Competitor of the Week sponsored by Galena Culver's and the Galena Gazette.

She led Galena's scoring efforts in two victories over River Ridge in scholastic bowl NUIC conference play. She answered 12 tossups of 44 heard in the Pirates' routs of the Wildcats, with scores of 420-80 and 440-10.

Later in the week, she answered another 10 in two wins over East Dubuque. Coach Ron Jenkins said, "Sophia is a solid performer on the team, with expertise in many academic areas. This week she had some of her best matches of the season so far." She was honored with a gift basket from the Galena Culver's, as well as a newspaper courtesy of the Galena Gazette.

Also nominated

Senior basketball player Cody Allendorf had 15 and 16 points in victories against West Carroll and River Ridge last week. Coach Matt Wieneen applauded his efforts, saying, "Cody has been coming strong the last couple of games. His defense especially has gotten better. He is averaging almost 8 rebounds a game and his ability to score at anytime is making him a huge mismatch for our opponents. He is not afraid of the big moments late in games which is one of the things I really like about him. He wants to take that last second shot or free throw!"

Junior Henry Anderson had the second-most tossups for the scholastic bowl team at the Winnebago Invitational Tournament. He answered nine questions for the day, helping the team go 6-1 in the morning rounds and take fourth place in the field of 16 in the afternoon championship rounds. "Henry was a key player on Saturday, filling a void left by the absence of a couple of our regular starters," according to Coach Ron Jenkins. "He has a thirst for knowledge and does very well at sports, pop culture and general knowledge questions."

Sophomore Zack Ehrler led the JV scholastic bowl team in scoring against River Ridge on Monday, correctly answering 12 of the 48 questions he heard, or 25 percent. Varsity coach Ron Jenkins said, "Zack is a real team player. He is solid on the JV team, especially in sports and current events, and he gladly plays for the varsity when we need him to. I like his enthusiasm! This was one of his best meets ever."

Learn during heart month

With February as National Heart Month, University of Illinois Extension Educator Diane Reinhold encourages all of us to learn more about the heart, heart diseases and how to fight them.

Heart disease is no longer a disease primarily affecting men. Although men are at greater risk for heart disease earlier in life, women are equally susceptible to heart disease. In fact heart disease is the leading cause of death for both men and women in the United States.

Heart disease is a general catch-all term describing various forms of heart disease. Terms such as arrhythmia, meaning irregular heart beat or coronary heart disease, also called coronary artery disease are all forms of heart disease.

Coronary heart disease (CHD) is a condition in which a waxy substance called plaque builds up on the inner walls of the coronary arteries. When plaque is deposited within the arteries, narrowing occurs leading to reduced blood flow throughout your body. When oxygen-rich blood is not able to get to the arms, legs, or pelvis region complications occur, such as pain, numbness, and occasionally infections. If plaque build-up reduces or blocks blood flow to the brain, a stroke may occur.

Myocardial infarction (MI), commonly known as a heart attack, occurs when blood flow decreases or stops to a part of the heart. This reduced blood flow can damage the heart muscle, and can cause chest pain. Chest pain, commonly called angina, is generally more noticeable when you are active.

Over time an area of plaque can rupture (break open) causing a blood clot to form on the surface of the plaque. If the clot becomes large enough, it can block the flow of blood to the portion of heart muscle fed by the artery, leading to a heart attack.

Over the past 30 years, death rates from heart disease have dropped. However, they have not dropped as much in women, as they have in men. Despite the national campaign, Go Red for Women, which began in 2004 to raise awareness about risks of heart disease in women, heart disease remains the leading cause of death.

In general, women have the same risk factors as men, yet some factors may affect women differently compared to men. Therefore, there is a greater need for self-awareness and identification of cardiovascular risk factors in women. In addition to an increased understanding of the importance of making lifestyle changes to reduce the risk for heart disease.

Risk factors for heart disease are behaviors or conditions that increase your chance of developing heart disease, such as having high blood pressure, high LDL cholesterol, having diabetes, smoking, being physically inactive and being overweight. These risk factors are called modifiable risk factors. Meaning, you can take measures to change your risk of developing heart disease by making changes to your lifestyle. There are of course some risk factors that cannot be changed, such as increasing age, race and family history.

you adjust to normal age-related physical changes that may affect your driving ability. By taking this class, you may receive a discount on your auto insurance.

The cost is $15 if you are an AARP member and $20 if non-member. Bring a sack lunch for this all-day class.

Tax season underway at Senior Resource Center

Act now if you want to make an appointment to have taxes done at the Senior Resource Center through the AARP Tax-Aide Program. Schedule your appointment for a time after you believe you will have all your tax documents; you can schedule before you have actually received all your documents.

Appointments in the Freeport office started Friday, Feb. 1, and end Friday, April 12. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursdays with half-days on Fridays. To make an appointment, call 815-235-9777, Ext. 221.

Tentative dates for service in the Hanover office are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 20, March 6, March 20 and April 3. To make an appointment for one of these sessions, call 815-235-9777, Ext. 221, and ask for an appointment in Hanover. If you are a Jo Daviess County resident and cannot attend one of the Hanover dates, appointments are available in the Freeport office.

The tax service is in high demand, with a limited number of appointments available. Unfortunately, not every person or return qualifies for the Tax-Aide program. For instance, specific types of income are excluded. They are: farm income (except if only land rental), military returns, ministerial income, cancellation of mortgage debt, business income that involves depreciation, rental income, and K-1 forms with ANY other entries than interest, dividends, capital gains or royalties.

Arrive 15 minutes before your appointment to complete required IRS intake information forms. The day of your appointment, bring:

- Photo identification.
- A Social Security card for each person on the return. (New Medicare cards to not have Social Security numbers.)
- Proof of all income (including Social Security benefits).
- Proof of medical insurance coverage for each person on the return.
- For joint returns, both must be present.
- Your previous year’s return.

Senior Resource Center receives $12,500 grant

FREEPORT—The Senior Resource Center, which has offices in Hanover and Freeport, announces that it has received a $12,500 grant for its Information and Assistance Program from the Community Grants Program of the Community Foundation of Northern Illinois with support from the William and Catherine McCoy Fund.

The program addresses the need for knowledge and resources that seniors, their family members, caregivers and disabled adults lack. The program bridges the gaps between needs and services by using a comprehensive resource directory plus expertise in Medicare and other benefit programs.

“The Information and Assistance Program is a one-stop opportunity to be informed and prepared for the challenges of aging,” said Susan Lambert, Senior Resource Center executive director. “This grant from the Community Foundation of Northern Illinois increases our capacity and enables us to serve even more people than are currently receiving help.”

New website in the future

A priority I have for the very near future is redesigning and revamping the GACC website. The goal is to make the site more user-friendly and give it an updated, polished look while still providing the much needed resources required while allowing for visitors to navigate through the site in a simpler fashion. Further, I am exploring the inclusion of a Member-Only login for members to have the autonomy to add events to our calendar as well as use our job tabs to include and input internal job postings within the business.

Upcoming Galena Chamber Events

Mother Nature has been quite angry lately and has caused us to reschedule (and reschedule) January's Business After Hours (BAH) at the Galena Brewing Company and February's Business Blend at Illinois Bank and Trust. While new dates are decided upon, please check our Facebook page for current information and updates.

Since Mother Nature was equally upset during our scheduled time to hold the monthly Business Blend, a new date is in the works as well. Stay tuned for new dates to be announced.

There has been much excitement and interest around hosting a BAH during 2019. As such, if you or your business would like to participate by hosting a BAH, please contact director@galenachamber.com in order to secure your spot. We've got some great events planned with lots of surprises to come!

Additionally, since the GACC has taken over the Business Blend from Illinois Bank and Trust, we are excited to bring in area speakers, spotlight individual businesses, and delish breakfast goodies and coffee or tea. If you are interested in showcasing your business, products and/or services please email or call. We'd love to have you show us what you've got!

East Dubuque may use firm to help with hiring next police chief

EAST DUBUQUE—The East Dubuque City Council may seek outside help to hire the city's next police chief to replace Steve O'Connell who recently announced his retirement.

Council members believe that they do not have the necessary background to properly conduct a search for the next police chief and then interview and hire the next police chief.

They are considering hiring a firm that has expertise in helping municipalities conduct such a search.

At this point, the council is considering two firms: Moulder and Associates LLC of Des Moines, Iowa; and GovHR USA, Northbrook.

Moulder's fee is $19,400 plus travel expenses. GovHR's fee is $25,300 plus travel expenses. In addition to a candidate search, each firm would assess each candidate and whittle down the candidates before the council conducts the final interviews.

The GovHR proposal also include a caveat that if the individual who was hired stayed for less than two years it would conduct the next recruitment process for its costs.

The council tabled the matter and asked Herrig to seek more information from Moulder if it would offer the same and ask both organizations if there would be a discount if a local candidate was hired.

The council also entered into a lengthy discussion as to what it does with fees collected for towing, video gaming and court appointed fees.

The towing fee is an administrative fee of $100 that is collected on towing of vehicles that have been involved in a crime. The council requested a new ordinance be drawn up to increase the fee to $150.

The fee goes into the general fund. Since 2011, the city has collected $21,090.

With video gaming revenue, which is now approaching $120,000 per year, the city places this revenue in its general fund and has used some of it for road repairs.

Alderman Adam Arling told the council that he believes the revenue should be kept out of the general fund and that the city should learn to budget without it. The money, he argued should go only for specific purposes such as street repairs. His fear is that the state might someday eliminate video gaming.

Herrig suggested that the council hold off on this discussion and include it as part of the budget workshops he's planning. The city manager said he wants to go through the city budget, line by line, with the council in order to develop a thorough understanding.

Council members ultimately agreed and tabled the agenda item.

Council members also learned that court appointed fees can be used to support law enforcement activities including salaries.

In other business, the council agreed:

- the mayor and city manager are the two authorized city representatives permitted to talk with the city attorney.
- agreed to buy back 900 hours of Fred Freiburger's unused vacation. The city buys back these hours on a two-to-one basis. The cost is $9,211.50.

Osmanski's opening salvo lead to the one-sided cham

Looking back at Chicago Bears great Bill Osmanski with his son, John Osmanski, Sr., of Galena

John Osmanski, Sr. of Galena never saw his father, Bill, play football for the Chicago Bears. But, oh, the stories he has heard and the people he has met almost make up for that.

by Brian McLane

victory:
Halas put up
those newspaper clippings in the locker room to his players for the championship.

It was an obvious success.

Bill Osmanski played on four National Football League championship teams for the Chicago Bears (1940, 1941, 1943, and 1946). But the 1940 championship was the most memorable of all. The Bears massacred the Washington Redskins 73-0 in the 1940 championship game.

Bill was drafted by the Bears in the first round (6th overall pick) in 1939. He led the league in rushing that year with 699 yards. He didn't play for the Bears in 1944 and 1945 while he served in the Marine Corps during World War II.

He attended the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, Mass., where he played fullback for the Crusaders from 1936 to 1938.

According to John, his father didn't want to play professional football when he was contacted by Coach George Halas of the Bears. He wanted to attend dental school. So Halas agreed that Bill could attend dental school at Northwestern in the afternoon, practice with the team in the mornings and attend team meetings in the evenings.

So Bill Osmanski's professional football career was on its way, and he and George Halas would become "like father and son," according to John.

In the 1940 championship game, Bill carried the ball 68 yards for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage.

The Bears went on to destroy the Redskins, 73-0.

"Early in the season we lost to the 'Skins 7-3," Bill told Football Digest. On the last play of the game, he was open for a pass in the end zone, but had his arms pinned to his sides by a Redskins player.

"The ball hit my chest and fell to the ground," he said. After the Bears complained to the officials when no interference call was made, the Redskins called them crybabies, which made the headlines.

Halas put up those newspaper clippings in the locker room to inspire and anger his players for the championship. It was an obvious success.

"All week we were boiling mad," Bill said.

After the 1947 season Bill retired from football to work on his dental practice in Chicago and start a family.

According to John, he eventually had five offices in the Chicago area, including one in their home.

John said his father was an adamant proponent of mouthguards for young football players, and he fitted many of the area kids with them.

"And you never knew who was going to stop by the house for dinner," said John, referring to celebrities and professional athletes who were acquaintances of his father.

"I golfed a lot with my dad," John said, and

At his home in Galena, John Osmanski, Sr., shows off a life-sized poster of his father, Chicago Bears great Bill Osmanski. afterwards while sitting in the lounge "15 to 20 people would show up telling stories about my dad."

John had the opportunity to be on the Bears' sideline during games, shooting photos for about 15 years. He wasn't a trained photographer, but it was one of the only ways he could be allowed on the sidelines. He said he also collected player chin straps, which he would pick up in the locker room.

In addition, John's son, John Jr., was a Bears ball boy for seven years.

John became acquainted with many Bears players and coaches and keeps in contact with the likes of Jim McMahon, Jim Thornton, Ron Rivera and more even today.

and Jim Harbaugh and friends of mine," John said. "He also said he was a great player." Brian McCaskey also was in the chat.

In 1982, John retired from his job where he served as a manager at Ridge until 1995. He then moved there, and John said he had school kids together and take the time to throw.

John himself played at the University of Wisconsin, where he served as a manager. He spent time at the Broncos camp, but

John has piles of memorabilia, including a championship game film, Redskins after the Bears' victory in most of their films. E and Dave Wannstedt are good friends. "It's been an exciting journey," Wannstedt said. "I call Bears Vice President [Osmanski] out every two weeks just to catch up." Wannstedt moved his family to Galena in 1998. He was the general manager at Eagle Creek. "Any Bears players came to golf with me," he said. "I used to get some high school players and Jim Harbaugh would come through my house. I would show them passes. I played football as a running back at Wisconsin-Stout in Menomonie. I was there three weeks at the Denver Broncos camp. I didn't make the team. I have a lot of photos and other Bears memorabilia. I have a copy of the 1940 championship game which he obtained from the Bears. The Bears had a fire that destroyed a lot of their history. I have an autographed photo of every player on the 1940 team, and he has his father's jersey. During the 1946 and 1947 seasons, Bill had the opportunity to play with his brother, Joe, together in the backfield of the Chicago Bears. Other honors Bill received include being named an All American player at Holy Cross and the Most Valuable Player in the 1939 College All Star Game, being inducted into the Collegiate Football Hall of Fame, and being named an All Pro in the National Football League. He is also in the National Polish-American Sports Hall of Fame. Bill still holds the Bears' record for the longest run from scrimmage for a touchdown (82 yards). In all, it was an extraordinary football career that still resonates almost 80 years after one of the most one-sided victories in professional football history.

County clerk outlines early voting options

GALENA—Voters wishing to cast a ballot prior to the April 2 Consolidated Election may do so by voting early, voting by mail or by grace-period voting. Any voter validly registered in Jo Daviess County may vote early after showing proper identification. Early voting begins Feb. 21 and continues through Monday, April 1.

If you are not currently a registered voter or need to make a change of name or address, you may do so through March 5 at the Jo Daviess County Clerk’s Office at the Jo Daviess County Courthouse or with a deputy registrar.

State law does allow for grace period registration and voting. Grace period registration and change of address requires two forms of identification, one showing your current address and takes place, in-person, at the clerk’s office.

Grace period voting runs from Wednesday, March 6 through election day at the clerk’s office.

Voting hours are weekdays, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The clerk’s office will be open for voting on Saturday, March 30, 9 a.m. until noon.

Voting by mail begins Feb. 21 and continues through Thursday, March 28. Thursday, March 28, 2019 is the last day for the clerk to mail a ballot.

Any early or grace period vote cast at the county clerk’s office is final and the voter is not eligible to vote at the polls on Election Day. Anyone with questions about voting early, voting by mail or grace period voting should call 815-777-0161.
